JUDICIOUS WEDDING OUT

There has been much discussion of the need of wedding out to keep public libraries in the highest condition of efficiency. Much can be said on both sides of this question, but as applied to libraries, but as applied to human possessions in general, how far is it worth while to preserve old rubbish? The accumulations in garrets to be tolerated on any island? Would it be well for every household to give away at once and absolutely every article of clothing or furniture or household decoration and every toy and book as soon as the need which prompted its acquisition has passed? There are those who would say Yes, say the Milwaukee Wisconsin. In this age of living in flats many households are obliged to follow this rigid rule. Where people live in country houses with space to store old things if the like why is it not best that they should exhibit their preferences instead of following rules devised by a board? The joy of future generations will be much shrivelled if at the end of every year every family gets rid of everything it does not need. However it is a foolish thing to accumulate clothing and furniture that one can never use again when there are constant opportunities to contribute to the comfort of deserving poor by giving the used superfluous to those who can put them to immediate use.

The first fault found with this law, by many up to the present time, has been the tendency on the part of the system to perform circuitous stunts instead of seeking scientific stability. Instead of being filled with daring, old and paid either in consequence. This the shopkeepers can make sure. It is not much head way in spite of the rapid progress to it also to its attribute it to fail of its deaths in the last four years with countless cases of mauling, and minor injuries. Accept of this have continued from the start that "no long" set of effects were set of 10 to 100 all the shops as a consequence of requiring, agent in falling. It is true of course that satisfaction resulted in additional knowledge. I have found out the way to store it of all that but it is not the best of the deaths which have been about such information have been state them on and that the further loss of life and caused because of foolishness for want of saving.

When women police are appointed one phase of their activity might be the breaking up of the annoying practice commonly known as street mauling. They could do more effectively than the police part of the force with the detection of this particular loss of traffic because more unobscured in their slouching while pedestrians in their authority would entail the same state consequences.

A Chicago utility company has put what it calls poleholders into its cars to prevent string hangers from justling one another, and incidentally perhaps from picking one another's pockets.

The Paris police have ruled that pedestrians must not hurt each other judging by the French duel this is the only way buying will ever be made popular in France.

A man never really knows what it is to burn up money until he has shot several tons of it into a furnace.

CHORES FOR THE BOY

The great loss of city boys is the loss of duties. Their sphere has been curtailed tremendously by the drawing of the city limit lines. When the boy lived on the farm or in the small town he found plenty of things to do which were apart in the doing and only incidentally work says the St. Paul Dispatch. He went abroad on his duties performing his chores and on the way he found rich treasure which he brought back with him and stored up for a lifetime use. Did he go after the evening cattle he left the soft earth move up between his happy toes and experienced a sensation of the composition yes and the poetry of the soil which the city boy can never know however much he hares feet to the asphalt. Every turn he made in his chosen in wood or field in barnyard or stable he found something to make it pleasure—were it only the exercise of muscles. The country boy had his limitations no doubt. The city boy has his advantages. If he only knew how to take them. He has really more material in hand out of which to stimulate his imagination, to quicken his intelligence—if only he could retain or his parents retain for him some of the duties of old times of the chores which would give ballast to his life. This may be the day of the division of labor and the hired man of the furnace and the lava was jump up to his work more steadily and more explicitly than the boy of the house. But the boy should be considered in this division and parents should not make their lives so easy that they rob him of doing his fundamental chores.

At a meeting of the Lianan society of London, Prof. Foulton presiding, a letter was read from Harry Paul Scherdling, as follows: "For hundreds of years pigeons have nested on the eaves of St. Dunstons Cathedral. They increased so much that many attempts have been made to exterminate them, but to vain. During the last few years there has been a sudden and startling diminution in the number of these cathedral pigeons. I am of the opinion that this manifest reduction is due to the asphalting of the streets round the cathedral. Between the stone eaves of the parent and the pigeons were able to pick up food in quantity in consequence of the asphalting and daily work and cleaning of the places in the immediate neighborhood the birds have gone.

A woman in Pennsylvania is in jail because she married ten husbands in a vain endeavor to find a perfect one. In the meantime the wife of the perfect one hunted was getting a divorce from one because she could not stand his perfection. It is impossible to please the women.
